Financial State of Michigan

Michigan's Financial Facts

Michigan, like most other states, improved its financial condition in 2023. This is a positive development, and Truth in Accounting applauds the state's commitment to improving its fiscal solvency. The state increased its money available to pay bills by $12.5 billion. However, Michigan still needed $28.2 billion to pay all its bills.

Michigan's overall financial condition improved by $12.5 billion with reported revenues exceeding expenses. The largest portion of the improvement in the state's financial condition related to decreases in Michigan's Public Schools Employee Retirement System (PSERS) unfunded pension and retiree health care liabilities because of changes in the economic, demographic and other assumptions used to estimate future benefit payments.

However, unfunded pensions and other post-retirement benefits continued to impair Michigan's ability to pay its bills. As outlined in the comprehensive 2024 Financial State of the States report, inflation, market volatility, and other economic factors could further impact the state's financial situation. Based upon the state's latest audited financial report for the fiscal year 2023, Michigan had a Taxpayer Burden[™] of $7,600, earning it a "D" grade from Truth in Accounting.
